History of the Society

Founded in 1945 the London Flower Lovers' League, held its first competition for growing daffodil bulbs in 1948. In 1967 the League became a registered charity and in 1974 the name was changed to the London Children's Flower Society.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth The Queen Mother was the Society's patron until her demise in 2002. In 2004 Her Royal Highness The Countess of Wessex agreed to become our new patron and has visited several schools on behalf of the Society.

Become a Friend

70 years supporting London's children in the growing of Spring and Summer
Flowers

Become a Friend of the London Children's Flower Society

We have been organising gardening competitions in schools for 70 years. Our Spring and Summer competitions are open to all Primary and Special Needs schools across the London Boroughs.

Our judges, who volunteer their services, and our supporters are important to us and we believe the Friends' group will provide a forum to bring together the voices of our supporters.

The aims of the Friends' group are:

- To enable the Friends' to keep in contact with Council members, judges, retired judges and others connected with the Society.
- To provide feedback, suggestions and support in the running of the gardening competitions organised by the Society.
- To give judges and other members of the Friends' group, influence within the Society, and enable them to provide ideas concerning the Society's future development.

If you have a passion for horticulture, and want to encourage London's Children to engage in gardening then become a Friend and have a say in how we can help in your community.
